“ I met Dr. Weiss when I was in high school in the late 1960's and spent a great deal of time talking with her. She wrote to me when I went away to college in 1971. I thoroughly enjoyed her and had the utmost respect for her. When I saw her name and photo in the paper a few minutes ago, I felt warm fondness and positive vibes. I have often thought of her when I drive past where she used to live. My condolences go out to the family as you grieve this loss. You were so lucky to have her.

“ I cannot even find the most appropriate words to define what an amazing psychiatrist and caring soul she was. She took me under her care when I was young, suffering anxiety/panic attacks/agoraphobia and an emotionally distressing marriage. With her medical knowledge, infinite way of understanding and sharing her caring soul, I was able to overcome this horrible illness, believe in myself & my strengths and walk away from my marriage. I've maintained success in my life, both financially and personally and attribute this all to her! A true gift to my life and beautiful woman. My heartfelt condolences to her family and friends. “ Dear Nora, You were a true example of a woman devoted to her family, friends and career. I will miss you Nora for all the times we spent time together and you offered me warmth and understanding. There will be a void in my life because I thought of you often, wondering when will be the next time we can sit across from one another and share our feelings and life. I felt very close to you although we were far apart but I knew if I had something to share I could share it with you. I still hear your voice when you would answer the phone and the memories will not ever relinquish. I love you Nora. Tania

I never met Dr. Weiss but remember hearing her name often around our house. She was my father Sam Schalit's psychiatrist and I'm sure helped him deal with his recurring bouts of major depression which were severe and disabling. Sadly, Sam died by suicide in 1972 when I just just 17, but I can't help but think Nora's treatments prolonged his life and enabled me to have a loving youth with him.
