“ Mitch was more than a colleague—he was my work brother during our time together at Berkshire Hathaway Fox & Roach Realtors. We shared Monday office hours, covered for one another without hesitation, and built a bond that went far beyond the workplace. He was a light that shined so brightly. When Mitch walked into a room, his smile radiated the warmth and kindness that lived in his heart. He had this rare ability to make everyone feel seen, known, and truly welcomed.

For me, someone who sometimes struggles with feeling alone in a crowded room, Mitch was a safe and steady presence. He made sure I never felt that way when he was around. That kind of friendship is rare and precious, and it’s something I will always hold close.

Even after he moved on from Fox & Roach, our friendship never faded. We made time for lunches at new restaurants, or a simple coffee catch-up—each moment a reminder of the comfort and joy he brought into my life.

Mitch was one of my favorite humans. Losing him leaves a deep ache, but I feel so grateful for the time we had, the laughs we shared, and the unwavering support he gave. I will miss him more than words can say.
