He was always deeply involved in their lives, serving as a Scoutmaster and volunteering for school activities like the band as well as a being a Poll Worker for all elections. A man of many talents, Paul was a master handyman who took great pride in maintaining his family's homes in Cape May, especially the historic three-story Victorian home from the 1800's. Known for his quick wit and sense of humor, Paul was a joyful prankster who delighted in making those around him laugh. His generosity knew no bounds, as he was always seeking ways to lend a hand to friends and family. Whether fixing something around the house or surprising his grandchildren with treats, special coins, Hess Trucks and jewelry, Paul's love was felt by all who knew him.
